Looking at the News with Col. Hugh Clark

A magazine writer declares that at League of Nations meetings a lot of delegates would be talking at the same time, much to the despair of the official reporter. That's where a female stenographer would come in handy.

†—†—†

A woman writes President Roosevelt asking that he put into effect a forty-hour week code for housewives. The nerve of her—asking for sixty per cent. reduction at one crack.

A few weeks ago we wrote of the futility of martyrdom and expressed the opinion that men today are not so cocksure of their opinions that they are willing to die or kill for them. Since then, we read a story about Al. Smith staying at home where the house party was about equally divided in religious views. He and his co-religionists got up early on a cold, stormy Sunday morning to go to mass and as they were wending their way through the snow they were thinking of the heretics cosily sleeping in their warm beds, and Al said, "Now wouldn't it be hell if they were right and we were wrong!"

†—†—†

The doubt is disquieting. There is more solace in the reflection that both are right, and more reason for that belief than for the doubt.

†—†—†

"The Best Time to Strike" is the heading of an editorial in a Labor journal. We always understood that the best time to strike is just as the ball is passing over the plate.

†—†—†

There are others, however, who contend that the best time to strike is when the iron is hot.

†—†—†

Still others adhere to the opinion that the best time to strike is while the striking is good.

†—†—†

Motor manufacturers and oil producers should be the very last to talk against codes that reduce the working hours of the days and the working hours of the week, because that will allow their employees and others to go out using cars and consuming oil and gas. It is all grist to their mills if you want to put it that way.

†—†—†

In the obituary of a New York editor it is related that "he was the world's champion check-grabber. If anyone else tried to pay anything in his presence he would grow morose."

That's all it says about this man.
It says no word about his income,
Nor how he made his money, nor
The part of Scotland that he came from.
And yet, methinks, it casts a gleam
Of light upon some racial features
Showing why Scotsmen have become
The dourest of all human creatures.

A strike, like war, should be the last resort. Peaceful strikes are wellnigh impossible. To make a strike affective the strikers have to prevent other men taking their places. Hence picketing and jeers and boos and catcalls and the cries of "scab" then eggs and stones. The police have to do their duty and the strikers think it their duty to prevent the police doing theirs. Hence rioting, the reading of the Riot Act and military aid to the civil power. It is war in miniature and there seems no way to avoid it altogether. WEDDING BELLS

Budd—Warden

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the First Baptist Church, Calgary on Saturday evening, October 21 at 8 o'clock when Vernie Beatrice, daughter of Mrs. J. C. Warden, Vulcan, was united in marriage with Mr. Naaman Budd of Reid Hill, son of Mr. E. Budd of Edmonton. Rev. Pattison was officiating clergyman. Both were unattended.

Both are popular young people of the Vulcan district; the bride having been a pupil of Reid Hill and Vulcan schools and the bridegroom has farmed in the Reid Hill district for a good number of years. Much happiness is wished by a wide circle of friends.

Conservative Speakers Heard at Vulcan

Two Hundred Electors Hear Trio of Speakers Deal With Political Issues.

Over two hundred Vulcan and district people faced the cold weather on Wednesday evening of last week and turned out to hear D. M. Duggan, M.L.A., provincial leader of the Conservative party at the Vulcan Theatre. Along with Mr. Duggan were John Irwin, M.L.A., Calgary, and Dr. Stanley, M.P., Calgary. Dr. G. M. Carson, president of the Vulcan Conservative association was chairman of the meeting and introduced the speakers to the audience.

John Irwin spoke first, and stated that during the past few years he had travelled a great deal from coast to coast in order to discover why the value of farm products were depressed and who was responsible. He claimed chain stores were largely responsible. They "pushed" farm products, selling them below cost to induce customers into the stores to sell them other wares at high prices. Government regulation of trade in stores of farm produce was needed to control the manipulation, Mr. Irwin claimed.

The next speaker was Dr. Stanley, M.P. He dealt at length with the Ottawa trade agreements and told of the opportunities they gave the Alberta farmer in the marketing of beef, bacon, etc., in the Old Country. He stressed the value of the beet producers and wool growers of the province and spoke out strongly in their interests. They needed every encouragement from the government said Dr. Stanley in concluding his address.

As the last speaker on the program, Mr. Duggan reviewed the growth of the public debt of the province, now nearing the $150,000,000 mark. Before the U.F.A. took over the government of the country the province had a bonded debt of $57,463,675; a floating debt of $5,589,000 and guarantees of $30,408,000, a total of $93,460,000; while the position at June 30, 1933, was a bonded debt of $131,140,000, floating debt $9,096,000, guarantees $9,824,104, total $150,061,000, the speaker said.

The U.F.A. government had not sensed the urgent need for economy in these times of stress, he held, and cited numerous occasions where economy should have been used. The telephone department was cited in his talk to bring this point out, and was the cost of the various co-operative schemes.

Monies that should have been set aside to reduce the national debt are being used for the expense of government, Mr. Duggan stated, and illustrated the point by explaining different revenues and how they were used.

To meet its growing obligations the province had to appeal to the federal government for financial aid, the speaker stated, and in referring to the interest rates, he stated that the province should be able to borrow at the same rate of interest as Ottawa.

Mr. Duggan advocated a reduction in the number of the members of legislature from 63 to 45. He said Manitoba has one member for every 12,730 population; Saskatchewan one member for every 14,632; B.C. one member for every 14,464; Alberta one member for every 11,613, with only 45 the saving to the province would be about $100,000 a year.

Motor licenses and gasoline taxes should be devoted to the highways and liquor profits should be put in a special fund instead of being put into the common fund as at present.

The audience was attentive and listened to the speakers with interest A number of questions were asked by the audience at the close of the meeting.

Turkey and chicken and every good thing to eat that goes with these fowl to make a full course supper was served by the Ladies' Aid of the United Church at the annual fowl supper served in the banquet room of the Oddfellows' hall on Saturday evening. Mothers had a holiday from the usual kitchen routine and whole families patronized, making the proceeds very gratifying to the ladies' organization. The Ladies' Aid wish to thank all who helped make the supper the success that it was.

CHARLES CLARK, Proprietor

SPIRITUAL, NOT ECONOMIC

Our local clergymen in every pulpit have been speaking on the subject of Thanksgiving, impressing the fact that God's goodness is unfailing but that man himself has brought about present calamities by false standards.

In this connection, the Christian Science Monitor adds its word.

"For a long time the writer has been convinced that the remedy for the distresses with which the world is now suffering will have to be moral and spiritual and not economic. The world is full of all things that are needed to supply the needs of humanity, and yet millions are on the verge of starvation in the midst of plenty.

"Suffering is rampant in the world because that which is needed to overcome it is in the hands of those who are under the control of greed impulses rather than moral and spiritual forces. When moral and spiritual forces control the actions of mankind, then every technical method of overcoming evil conditions will pass from consideration. There is no fixedness in the technicality of economics, as its so-called principles are as variable as the human mind. Any efforts to establish fixed principles in economics is also at the mercy of the greed impulse.

"Our big men! Most of us have worshipped at their shrine in the years gone by. To quote a big business man or a banker on any subject was the last word to be said on that subject. Alas! We were made wise with the wisdom of this world, and we awoke to the fact that "The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God." The worldly great keep the outside of the platter reasonably clean, but the inside is soiled with selfish cruelties. We have put our trust in men and not in God, and men have failed us. Evidence is now being furnished us that "He taketh the wise in his craftiness," and that the mighty who have forgotten God are being brought low. One solution of the world's problems, and the only one really needed, is given in the twelfth chapter of Mark's Gospel:

"And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength; this is the first commandment. And the second is like, namely this. Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these."

WHY WE PAY TAXES

We howl about taxes. And well we may. Much tax money is wastefully spent. But what about the good the taxes do? We never mentioned that. All we do is yell and shriek, bark and complain.

But the tax is the difference between the tribesmen with his club and the high school principal. It is the difference between the code of the jungle and the civil and moral law.

In the primitive days a woman or an ox was the property of the man, and when the man wanted another man's wife or his ox he went with his club and took possession. The tax is the difference between the rule of force and the polling booth.

The tax we howl at is the difference between government by the beak and talons and bloody maw as compared with government by constitution, freemen and the ballot. The tax is our shelter, our guardian against crime, the crime and criminals that would overrun us and rule us and be our masters but for the defense taxes provide.

The tax educates our children. It takes them in childhood, follows them into the higher institutions and high school, goes side by side with them out into society, schooled and trained and equipped to think and reason and form intelligent conclusions.—Exchange.

BACK TO HOMESPUN

Conflicting theories are always disturbing, and from time to time we are brought face to face with two entirely different lines of opinion, both of which appear to have merits.

For instance, there is a school of thought very strong in the East, particularly from Montreal and Ottawa, which impresses upon us the virtue of plain living. The emphasis on that sterling accompaniement of high thinking is not so frequent.

These speakers arrive in the West charged with their gospel. They urge economical living, pointing to the French habitant as an example that the West would do well to follow. They present the ideal of homespun, with self-sustainment, and small purchases.

But it is noticeable that those who preach homespun do not practice homespun—neither they nor their wives nor their children. It is obvious that they have divided Canadians into at least two classes—themselves and those lesser of God's creatures who should be humbly grateful to toil and spin for small returns.

This doctrine does not go over well in the West, possibly because the air and the spaces stimulate the individual to a sense of personal possibilities and ambition. The Westerner is impatient of class and privilege. He is reluctant to concede that one element of society has a God-given right to silk, while he and his children are doomed to harsh homespun. He is ambitious to acquire for himself and more particularly for his children a share of the niceties and opportunities of life. In short, the Westerner does not think of himself as a peasant. And that is unfortunate for those who attempt to impress upon him the virtues of a humble peasantry.

On the other hand it may be conceded that Western ambition has overreached itself. Instead of conserving, storing away our money, we spent. We banked too much on a sunny future, and as quickly as possible we abandoned homespun, discarded the old oaken bucket and sought a few of the comforts of life, before we were sufficiently safeguarded against the rainy day. We went too fast.

But we did pour our money into Eastern factories—let that not be forgotten. If we had stuck to humble living, stored away the profit from each crop, and refused to purchase anything not vitally necessary to life, we would have been less worried, and less worry to others. But the Eastern manufacturer and financier, would not have reaped such a harvest.

It is all probably a matter of atmosphere. The air of the West stimulates enterprise and ambition. It challenges and searches and defies, and it places its indelible stamp upon its people, who also challenge and defy.

And, after all, is there any reason or excuse for a humble peasantry in Canada, at any rate for an enforced peasantry?

STEVENS TO SUPPORT

In addressing the Canadian Chamber of Commerce recently, Hon. H. H. Stevens urged the Canadian packers to give some consideration to the problem of beef. He presented the impossibility of the beef industry continuing existence at a cent and a half a pound for their cattle

In addressing the packers directly, Mr. Stevens placed his finger on one of the most responsible factors in the low price of cattle, as well as of hogs. It is the packers who set the price, and there is little alternative for the hard pressed producers, but to accept that price. It is a condition so obviously crippling to the industry, that Mr. Stevens' warning to the packers has come none too soon.

The livestock men have long urged the setting up of a National Marketing Board, to regulate conditions under which export cattle are marketed, as well as to exercise some supervision over domestic marketing. It is obvious that no proportionate benefit in the depressed prices of beef, is passed on to the consumer. He pays much the same price whether beef is selling for 4 cents or 1½ cents. It is as usual, the manipulators between producer and consumer who benefit.

With the incredibly low price of beef prevailing at present, the rancher is unable to pay a fair price for the feed which he must purchase from the farmer. He is in the grip of circumstances which are destructive. Added to feed scarcity, prices have been hammered down to zero. When cattle are sold at $15.00 a head, because the owner must unload, it is time for the government to investigate and take remedial action.

The low cattle prices affect most seriously the ranching industry, but they also affect all farmers from coast to coast.

In justice to the great mass of Canadians, the governments should exercise some restraining influence on the distributors who exploit both consumer and producer.

INCOME TAX SECRETS

All transactions between the government of Canada and those who pay income tax are by law made secret. The tax returns are not available to the public. Time after time ministers have refused to answer on the floor of Parliament questions regarding the incomes of and taxes paid by different individuals and corporations. The rule of secrecy extends so far that the income tax returns are not made available even to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, which could produce some very illuminating data based upon them as to income of different classes of producers in Canada and of different areas in Canada.

Various incidents have occurred over the term of the post-war years to make the general public a little suspicious of the secrecy rule regarding income tax.

More recently there has been the case of I. W. C. Solloway, a former mining broker. Faced with a demand from income tax officials for additional taxes amounting to approximately $700,000, Mr. Solloway is reported to have had interviews with different members of the Cabinet, as a result of which he was able to effect a settlement of the tax for $100,000.

The public wants to know if this is a general practice and if there are any large number of cases in which, by personal negotiation, individuals or corporations have been able to pay a smaller tax than the officers of the income tax branch had assessed them for.

If the practice is general, it is one that could easily lead to the most grave abuses. One does not have to suggest that there was anything underhand in the Solloway settlement to point out that such a procedure would open the door to graft and political fixing of the worst type and the parties could in such a process find an easy source of campaign funds.

If the income tax operations of the government are to be secret even from members of Parliament, then assurance must be given that the tax is administered without favor to anyone.—Financial Post.

LESS OF EVERYTHING

The Border Cities Star presents an amusing reaction to the proposed reduction in wheat growing when it says:

"Since leading economists advocate restricted farm production as a cure for economic ills, it is to be hoped the various fall fairs through Ontario offer substantial prizes for the following—Smallest yield of corn per acre; Leanest hog; Sheep with shortest wool; Cow giving the least milk; Largest crop of potato bugs."

It is to be hoped that reduction is a temporary expedient and it is in belief in its temporary nature that Western farmers are accepting it.

There is certain difficulty in adjusting the mind to the virtues of reduced production. For so long the gospel of maximum production has been preached, that it is hard to face about.

So much time, money and research have been given in Western Canada to bringing about efficiency in grain growing, that it would be very short-sighted to allow all this good work to lapse. Canada's hope in the world market, lies as never before in the quality of her grain. Pure seed, the maximum yield per acre are as true a gospel as ever. The present situation is temporary, requiring no doubt, immediate action in some such line as adopted. But it is believed that ultimately some of the former importing nations will again return to importing. It cannot be certain that from year to year, there will be no crop failures. Nature will eventually move inexorably, and then Canada should be in position to resume her larger trade.

She will be in that position only if she continues her foundation work of producing the best wheat in the world.

Did You Ever Stop to Think . . .

THAT a business must advertise to achieve success.

THE more good advertising is used, the more valuable its service becomes.

ADVERTISING is a courtesy due the people.

GOOD advertising holds old customers and creates new ones.
IT takes new business to keep any business concern alive.

COURTESY is a great help to any business.

PEOPLE expect courtesy just as they expect quality goods at reasonable prices.

EVERY business man or woman should radiate courtesy every minute of the busy day.

WHEN courtesy is combined with good merchandise, fair prices and honest advertising, a business is bound to succeed.

MODERN BUSINESS CONCERNS USE THESE MODERN METHODS, WHICH ALWAYS RESULT IN A CLOSER TIE BETWEEN THEIR CUSTOMERS AND THEIR BUSINESS

AND THE RICH ARE OBJECTS OF PITY

Sir Herbert Samuel, according to the Lethbridge Herald once addressed a large audience in the mining area, at a time when social reform was being discussed. He made his big hit with the following poem:

"Now Dives daily feasted, and was gorgeously arrayed,
Not at all because he liked it, but because 'twas 'good for trade.'
That the poor might get more calico
he clothed himself in silk,
He surfeited himself with cream,
that they might get the milk.
He fed five hundred servants, that the poor might not beg bread,
And had his vessels made of gold that they might get more lead.
And then to show his sympathy with the deserving poor
He did no useful work himself, that they might do the more.
You'll think all this is very strange,
but then, of course, you know,
'Twas in a far-off country, and a long long time ago."

Y. P. S. Confernce

Commencing another season of work with renewed vigor, the Young People's Societies of High River Presbytery met on Tuesday at High River for afternoon and evening sessions. Ten of the fourteen Young People's groups were represented with delegates present from Okotoks Aldersyde, High River, Nanton, Turner Valley, Granum, Northern Light, Brant, Vulcan, Blackie. Societies not represented were Tongue Creek, Parkland, Claresholm and Farrow.

Miss Eileen Hicks, presided at the afternoon session,' and the year's work was reviewed by the convenors of different departments. Ted Wellman of Blackie presented the treasurer's report, and the congratulations of the presbytery were extended to the winners of the debating league, Mr. Butterwick and Mrs. Webb (Miss Fleming) of Farrow. It was decided to continue with debating and dramatic leagues which had provided such educational and entertaining features last year with the plays selected to be one act, and about thirty minutes in length. Ivan Howden of Nanton presented the Conference report, showing the local Presbytery Y.P.S. to have made excellent showing. A discussion on the problems of finance took place. There is fear that the four Western provinces will be reduced to two travelling secretaries unless finances are sustained. Dr. Frank Langford of Toronto, secretary of the Board of Religious Education in Canada, spoke briefly on Y.P.S. work in Canada.

Evening Program

The evening program opened with supper provided by the various participating societies. Following the toast to the King, a toast to the Church was proposed by Archie Kadey of Okotoks with Rev. Alex. Rannie responding. A piano solo by Miss Mildred McDougall was followed by a toast to the Y.P.S. by Dr. Langford, with Richard Hunter of Nanton responding.

Granum Y.P.S. was in charge of the devotional period. Interesting addresses were given by Mr. Hibbert of Calgary and Mr. Pettigrew, provincial president of Calgary. It was recorded by these speakers that one hundred and fifty societies flourish in Alberta, and the work is growing in membership and enthusiasm. Dr. Langford again spoke along inspirational lines, offering a stimulating picture of the needs of the world which must be met by youth. Ernie Jater of Calgary, leadership training leader, spoke on the value of manuals for training in leadership.

Other entertainment was a vocal duet by Kay Overand and Helen Pocock of Okotoks and readings by Melba Armstrong of Nanton.

Officers elected for the year, were: Hon. Pres., Dr. Langford; President, Gladys Goodwin; Vice President, Gordon Butterwick, Farrow; Sec'y, Kathleen Ellis; Treas., Carl Christofferson, Brant; Riveter, Kathleen Ellis; M. and M. Sec'y, Miss Mae McPherson, Granum; Debating Convenor, Ivan Howden, Nanton; Leadership Convenor, Nelson Merriam; Dramatic Convenor, Mrs. John Pearce, Claresholm.

The new officers were welcomed to the responsibilities of office, and Miss Gladys Goodwin, the incoming president, in a short speech, acknowledged the honor and responsibility of the work of the coming season.

CONSERVATION T V GAS RESOURCES

A point has been brought out recently in connection with conservation, that is perhaps not generally realized. Hon. R. G. Reid, minister of lands and mines, states that conservation was being carried on under the regulations of the oil and gas well act of 1931, and not under the Turner Valley Gas Conservation Act.

The press records that Model Oils, Mercury and Miracle are three important companies that have signified intention of co-operating in a conservation policy and no doubt others hold the same views.

The Political World of Calgary describes the situation thus:

"Certain oil interests claim that restricting the natural flow of oil or gas would cause a gradual stoppage in the well, due to the formation of wax. Other interests claimed that the value of naphtha extracted more than warranted the waste of natural gas. In addition to these protests were added the protests of companies whose wells would be entirely shut down, due to low extraction per centage. Also the value of the Turner Valley oil field activity to trade and commerce if allowed to operate unrestricted, had to be given careful consideration.

On the other hand we have the opinion that the field, unless restricted, will be unproductive in the course of a few years."

There is now indication that the government and the oil interests, realizing that natural resources must be conserved, will co-operate in safeguarding along wise lines.

COOTE TELLS STORY POINTS A LESSON

Advice to Revolutionaries as Well as to Stand-pats, Taken from Granum Farmer

The Lethbridge Herald "Left Hand Corner" has collected this little story from the Edmonton Journal attributed to George Coote.

To the man in the valley the hill looks like a mountain; to the man on top of the hill, it stands revealed as a fere ripple in contrast to the great mountain range beyond. So in life. Obstacles to a course of action seem great or small depending on one's position. It is even necessary, sometimes, to make the approach from an entirely new angle if the obstacle to progress is to be overcome.

When George Coote, M.P., was in Edmonton recently, he told a story to some of his friends. It is a good story and worth repeating for its own sake but it carries with it a lesson, too, for those who wish to learn.

Driving to Granum, in the south of the province, a motorist became rather confused over the route and sought advice from an old farmer who stood by a fence disconsolately gazing at what a recent storm had left of his crop.

"Is this the road to Granum?" the driver asked.

The old chap turned slowly, pushed his hat further back on his head, pondered awhile and announced: "Yes Go straight ahead for half a mile, turn to your right for a mile, then turn to your left for—No. That won't do either. The bridge was washed out there. Ye can't get across.

"Well, is there any other road?"

Another pause for thought and the farmer decided it would be possible for the motorist to turn back for half a mile, go to the left for a mile and a half and turn left again for—. "No," he interrupted himself, "that won't do either. Ye'll get your car stuck. Its muskeg and ye'll never get through."

Another pause and the now impatient motorist put it to the old gentleman bluntly: "Well, if you were going to Granum, how would you go?"

Two minutes of deep thought this time and then came the answer: "If I was goin' to Granum, I wouldn't start from here."

The old gentleman's advice is passed on to those who offer vast changes in methods of life as the only true reforms as well as to those who reject them as wholly impossible. Progress won step by step is not only surer even if slower, but with each step taken the view changes and what appeared as a mountain when viewed from the valley, soon sinks to its proper perspective as but a small obstacle in the road. "Here" is not always the best place from which to jump for "there."

Ethel Campbell, Doris Simington, Clara Gold, Clifford McAskile, John Jamieson and Royce Clark were delegates to the Young People's rally at High River. They attended afternoon supper and evening sessions and report a profitable and interesting conference. Mr. W. D. Allan, with his carfull, drove over for the evening session.

have had considerable success in prences, but when the disputants take venting strikes and adjusting differthe bits in their teeth and the public take sides it engenders strife that lasts a long time. But while human nature remains as it is, neither war nor strikes can be outlawed except in pious resolutions.

Ring W. Lardner, next to Finley Peter Dunne, was the foremost of modern American humorists. It was he who created that great big clown, Jack Keefe who as a right-hander had such fine contempt for southpaws Lardner made this ignorant, conceited busher say many funny things such as "the laugh will be on the other foot" and "Old Diagnosis with a lantern looking for an honest man." He laughed out of court the purists who spell hell with a dash. Jack wrote it he—ll.

A husband is the man who stands by you in the troubles you wouldn't have had if you hadn't married him.

This would have been his second appearance on the stage here this fall, having a month ago entertained a local audience. Besides being a manipulator of exceptional ability he is a ventriloquist of first order, plays the mandolin, guitar and banjo well and does chalk talk work. A one-man show. While in Vulcan he was the guest of "Bob" McElroy, local magician.
